INTRODUCTION

This report is intended to give you a deeper understanding of Gregory Geary's Thinking Style, Behavioral Traits, and Interests in relation to the position of Counter Sales 2016. Along with some insight into his motivations and challenge areas, it will provide you with useful tips to aid in his training and development.

What's in this report?

RESULTS SUMMARY

Assessment results are compared to the Performance Model, which shows the range of scores typical for success in the position

DEFINITIONS

Thinking Style and Behavioral Traits will be defined on the pages following the results summary

PERSONALIZED FEEDBACK

You will receive feedback personalized for the individual based on the results and how they should be interpreted

What does the assessment measure?

THINKING STYLE

- Thinking Style is the ability to process information.
- It includes problem-solving, communication, interaction, and learning skills.
- Results are illustrated on scales ranging from 1 to 10.
- A higher score is not necessarily the best indicator of on-the-job performance.

BEHAVIORAL TRAITS

- Behavioral Traits are commonly observed actions that help define who someone is.
- Each scale is defined by two opposing, but equally valuable, end points.
- One side of the continuum is not better than the other.

INTERESTS

- The Interests section may predict motivation and potential satisfaction with various jobs.
- These are ranked in order from the highest- to lowest-scoring interest.

Distortion was detected in this report. What does that mean?

Some candidates may answer the behavioral questions in a way that is socially desirable or to make themselves look better, rather than respond candidly and risk disapproval. Based on his assessment results, there is a chance that Gregory may not have been fully candid in his responses. Therefore, we recommend that you take this into account during your coaching process.

COMPOSITE SCORE

Thinking Style

Composite Score A reflection of overall learning, reasoning, and problem-solving potential

The Composite Score is the combined score of the four other Thinking Style scales. Because looking at a person's Thinking Style comprehensively is most effective in a coaching context, it is the only Thinking Style scale discussed in this report.

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for the Composite Score.
- He likely has good potential for learning new information.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He has the potential to quickly learn new selling information that is somewhat advanced.
- He generally learns new information about sales and products best by applying it.
- Upon completing a training program, he should pick up new concepts relatively easily.
- Gregory is capable of learning the necessary information to develop a strategic sales plan.
- While Gregory understands general information, he may find highly complex sales data or instruction challenging.

Management tips:

- If he becomes frustrated during the sales training process, create enthusiasm and encourage as much participation as possible.
- Educate him about the reasons behind a task and the value it brings to the team's or organization's goals.
- Look for opportunities for him to be creative or solve problems around sales goals to keep him invested in his work.

BOTTOM LINE:

Gregory may be expected to complete a typical sales training program with success and be generally adaptive in most training situations.

PACE

Behavioral Traits

Pace Overall rate of task completion

< STEADY

GG

URGENT >

- Gregory does not fit the Performance Model for Pace.
- He tends to be very patient and good with routine.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He may be well-suited for a sales environment that employs a methodical approach to the sales process.
- Typically, he may not show a high sense of urgency under routine sales assignments.
- Gregory probably doesn't like feeling pressured, even with looming sales goals.
- He tends to have a strong preference for working at an unhurried pace.
- Most interested in a job well done, he could appreciate a sales environment that places a greater value on the quality of the sales process rather than the quantity of sales.

Management tips:

- Work with him to set appropriate sales deadlines and quotas, and be sure to develop tactics for crunch periods requiring a rapid pace.
- Recognize the benefits of his ability to stay focused, but let him know when you believe a more urgent pace would be beneficial or necessary.
- Give him sales opportunities that require longevity and steadiness.

BOTTOM LINE:

Gregory may be most effective working in a relaxed environment where he can focus on one task at a time.

ASSERTIVENESS

Behavioral Traits

Assertiveness Expression of opinions and need for control

< UNASSUMING

FORCEFUL >

GG

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for Assertiveness.
- He tends to be fairly comfortable sticking up for his opinions and needs.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He tends to be motivated by situations in which he is held accountable for results.
- He is willing to be assertive, to be more of a leader than a follower.
- Gregory typically uses direct statements in sales negotiations.
- He will likely present his sales pitch with a fair amount of confidence.
- At times, he may be overly assertive when negotiating sales.

Management tips:

- Provide positive feedback when he engages in active listening rather than just pushing his agenda.
- If you notice that he tends to dominate in sales situations, provide feedback suggesting that he allow clients more opportunity to express their doubts.
- Give him opportunities to lead discussions if he appears to have a desire to do so.

BOTTOM LINE:

He takes on leadership roles comfortably but is still willing to listen to others' perspectives carefully when the situation calls for it.

SOCIABILITY

Behavioral Traits

Sociability Desire for interaction with others

< RESERVED

OUTGOING >

CG

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for Sociability.
- He tends to be very extraverted and people-oriented.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He interacts with clients and coworkers regularly and has a generally friendly and welcoming disposition.
- He may find it very difficult to follow a sales process in a task-oriented, businesslike fashion that allows little interaction with colleagues.
- Gregory tends to be open and approachable with both clients and coworkers.
- Most likely, he establishes and develops a broad client base and maintains relationships with his prospects.
- He likes to confer with clients and coworkers and may, at times, socialize excessively, distracting him from the sale at hand.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to talk through his ideas since this is how he likely processes information.
- Challenge him to draw out others' perspectives and to listen attentively to more reserved colleagues, prospects, and clients.
- Give him plenty of opportunities to socialize and be part of a sales team, but be careful about allowing this to impede his focus on sales goals.

BOTTOM LINE:

Gregory is motivated by the chance to interact with clients, and welcomes the opportunity to collaborate with coworkers.

CONFORMITY

Behavioral Traits

Conformity Attitude on policies and supervision

< STRONG-WILLED

COMPLIANT >

GG

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for Conformity.
- He tends to be cooperative and usually works within the rules.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He is typically willing to accept guidance and suggestions from those in authority.
- He is friendly, cooperative, and likely fairly easy to manage.
- Gregory demonstrates a positive attitude concerning organizational constraints and restrictions.
- He should be willing to conform to sales policies without feeling any loss of personal freedom.
- He will usually accept the advice and criticism of sales managers.

Management tips:

- Encourage free thinking and reward efforts to develop creative solutions to accomplishing sales tasks, even if they contradict established procedures.
- Acknowledge the importance of procedural requirements, but encourage personal expression in areas that don't need as much regulation.
- Demonstrate in your daily work how it is acceptable to bend the rules within the limits of your organizational culture.

BOTTOM LINE:

He responds well to a regulated sales environment and is willing to accept external controls.

OUTLOOK

Behavioral Traits

Outlook Anticipation of outcomes and motives

< SKEPTICAL

GG

TRUSTING >

- Gregory does not fit the Performance Model for Outlook.
- He tends to be fairly skeptical and often looks for the evidence to back up a claim.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He may have a guarded outlook on how well things are likely to turn out.
- He may be skeptical of clients who make emotional appeals.
- Gregory may not always welcome change, unless it is supported by strong justification.
- He tends to question changes in the sales process and can be doubtful of the benefits.
- He may approach sales challenges and difficult clients with caution.

Management tips:

- Be sure to clarify your intentions so he doesn't jump to conclusions.
- Allow him to openly express his skepticism so you can provide the reassurance or evidence that he or others might need.
- Although skepticism can uncover important issues, be watchful that this doesn't produce an overly negative sales environment or contentious interactions with prospects and clients.

BOTTOM LINE:

Gregory functions best when able to express a reasonable amount of concern and skepticism in sales situations.

DECISIVENESS

Behavioral Traits

Decisiveness Use of speed and caution to make decisions

< DELIBERATE

BOLD >

GG

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for Decisiveness.
- He prefers to take some time to think carefully before making a decision.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- Gregory is capable of making timely decisions during sales negotiations, but may hesitate when under stress.
- He usually takes time to collect supporting information and data before drawing conclusions.
- Most likely, he will carefully weigh the risks of a situation before making a decision.
- If he feels disorganized or ill-prepared, Gregory may delay making important decisions during the sales process.
- He likely prefers to have a reasonable amount of time to consider significant decisions.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to find a constructive way to evaluate ideas, such as listing pros and cons.
- Set a clear deadline for when you require an answer.
- Give him opportunities to make smaller or less critical decisions in a more timely fashion.

BOTTOM LINE:

He prefers to make careful, informed decisions, but can be convinced to move quickly when urgency is required.

ACCOMMODATION

Behavioral Traits

Accommodation Inclination to tend to others' needs and ideas

< STEADFAST

GG

AGREEABLE >

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for Accommodating.
- He tends to be fairly agreeable and willing to go along with the group.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- He tends to have a cooperative outlook and is generally prepared to help clients.
- Usually, he recognizes the need for working with others and is willing to share resources and information.
- When it comes to most issues, he is more likely to express a moderate opinion than an extreme one.
- Gregory is generally pleasant, friendly, and patient during sales negotiations.
- He will probably seek solutions that are acceptable to everyone during the sales process.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to express his opinions rather than just going along with the group or trying to appease a client.
- Provide opportunities for him to build his self-confidence so that he is more likely to speak up with a differing opinion when working with clients.
- When appropriate, enlist his aid to help colleagues reach compromises.

BOTTOM LINE:

He is attentive to clients but also appreciates a forum to express a contrary point of view.

INDEPENDENCE

Behavioral Traits

Independence Level of preference for instruction and guidance

< RELIANT

AUTONOMOUS >

GG

- Gregory fits the Performance Model for Independence.
- He may seek support and is usually ready to accept supervision.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- Most of the time, he recognizes the need for guidance during the sales process.
- Occasionally, he may prefer to proceed through sales negotiations his own way.
- Most likely, he works best with defined plans and established sales procedures.
- Gregory probably believes that job responsibilities should be clearly defined so that everybody knows what is expected of them.
- He generally prefers to follow an established sales process.

Management tips:

- Be available to answer questions or offer support as needed during the sales process.
- If more autonomy is desirable, assign sales tasks with an increasing level of independence so he becomes more comfortable working on his own.
- In cases where he is directing his own work, make sure he understands he can come to you for support.

BOTTOM LINE:

Gregory usually prefers specific instructions and a moderate level of guidance.

JUDGMENT

Behavioral Traits

Judgment Basis for forming opinions and making decisions

< INTUITIVE

GG

FACTUAL >

- Gregory does not fit the Performance Model for Judgment.
- He tends to supplement personal experience and instinct with available facts to make decisions.

What you need to know about Gregory:

- At times, he could neglect relevant objective information when determining appropriate sales solutions.
- He may rely more on his instincts than the relevant facts when making sales decisions.
- He usually takes the circumstances of a sales situation into account before making judgment calls.
- When he feels it's appropriate, he can be swayed by emotional arguments during sales negotiations.
- When there isn't enough factual information available during the sales process, Gregory is probably comfortable following a hunch.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to investigate a variety of sources to make well-rounded decisions during selling situations.
- Ask him to explain his reasoning to clients and colleagues when making critical sales decisions.
- When necessary, help him gather more evidence to make informed decisions regarding appropriate sales solutions.

BOTTOM LINE:

He may try to balance his subjective biases with logic to make well-rounded decisions.

What is Gregory most interested in?

Mechanical: Gregory seems to be motivated by Mechanical activities. He may enjoy meeting sales goals with a grounded, practical approach and he likely welcomes opportunities to get his “hands dirty” with sales objectives that are tangible, practical, and functional. If he can contribute this way, he is more likely to feel enthusiastic about the sales task at hand.

Technical: Technical aspects of the sales process appear to interest Gregory. Most likely, he is interested in sales presentations that involve research, theories, and the application of technical information. He may be particularly interested in analytical or conceptual tasks that require critical thinking.

Financial/Admin: Gregory appears to be interested in the Financial or Administrative side of selling situations. Therefore, he is likely to organize sales-related information in order to make the selling process more efficient. A main source of motivation for him may be in classifying and managing information.

BOTTOM LINE:

Gregory will likely enjoy the Financial/Administrative aspects of the job. However, he may not find Enterprising and People Service activities as motivating as other salespeople who have been successful in this position.
