Hi, guys! I finally have one for you that I think could be a good option. He's available daily from 12:30-1:00 to chat. Let me know what I can set up for you.

Candidate Name: John Disque

- Worked in real estate from 2009-2017. Started as an agent and then moved into property management and leasing.
 - Was overseeing 100-150 properties and it got very time-consuming. There were a lot of guidelines so he got out of the business.
- During this time, he also had a cleaning business that he grew to 12 buildings. Ran with a partner. But wasn't able to find good supervisors and was eating up all his time, so he sold out of this.
- After real estate, he wanted something less stressful, so he went into Verizon Wireless.
 - 100% commission
 - Extremely competitive. Loved this!
- When COVID hit, there were less people walking through the door. Boss keeps trying to call him back, but he's not sure he wants to go. People are buying things online more now.
- Took job with United Rentals, where he is selling rental equipment.
 - Makes 200+ phone calls/day handling "overdues" (people who were supposed to bring things back) and reservations
 - Is on the safety committee (was able to convince the guys in the back to do their stretching daily – they were signing off that it was done, but they weren't doing it)
 - Checks inventory, handles price inquiries, loads trucks, coordinates drivers
- RFL: feels like his role is more secretarial than actual selling. Loves the rush of selling and wants to be back in selling role. Discussed his day-to-day vs. counter sales role and he seems excited by structure of this role and by possibility of promotion (wanted to make sure he's not looking for outside sales role).
- Comp: needs to be at $50K base
