INTRODUCTION

This report is intended to give you a deeper understanding of Ian Leach's Thinking Style, Behavioral Traits, and Interests in relation to the position of Regional Sales Manager. Along with some insight into his motivations and challenge areas, it will provide you with useful tips to aid in his training and development.

What's in this report?

RESULTS SUMMARY

Assessment results are compared to the Performance Model, which shows the range of scores typical for success in the position

DEFINITIONS

Thinking Style and Behavioral Traits will be defined on the pages following the results summary

PERSONALIZED FEEDBACK

You will receive feedback personalized for the individual based on the results and how they should be interpreted

What does the assessment measure?

THINKING STYLE

- Thinking Style is the ability to process information.
- It includes problem-solving, communication, interaction, and learning skills.
- Results are illustrated on scales ranging from 1 to 10.
- A higher score is not necessarily the best indicator of on-the-job performance.

BEHAVIORAL TRAITS

- Behavioral Traits are commonly observed actions that help define who someone is.
- Each scale is defined by two opposing, but equally valuable, end points.
- One side of the continuum is not better than the other.

INTERESTS

- The Interests section may predict motivation and potential satisfaction with various jobs.
- These are ranked in order from the highest- to lowest-scoring interest.

Distortion was not detected in this report. What does that mean?

Some candidates may answer in a way that is socially desirable or to make themselves look better, rather than respond candidly and risk disapproval. Based on his assessment results, it appears that Ian answered candidly.

COMPOSITE SCORE

Thinking Style

Composite Score A reflection of overall learning, reasoning, and problem-solving potential

The Composite Score is the combined score of the four other Thinking Style scales. Because looking at a person's Thinking Style comprehensively is most effective in a coaching context, it is the only Thinking Style scale discussed in this report.

- Ian fits the Performance Model for the Composite Score.
- He likely has good potential for learning new information.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He has the potential to quickly learn new selling information that is somewhat advanced.
- He generally learns new information about sales and products best by applying it.
- Upon completing a training program, he should pick up new concepts relatively easily.
- Ian is capable of learning the necessary information to develop a strategic sales plan.
- While Ian understands general information, he may find highly complex sales data or instruction challenging.

Management tips:

- If he becomes frustrated during the sales training process, create enthusiasm and encourage as much participation as possible.
- Educate him about the reasons behind a task and the value it brings to the team's or organization's goals.
- Look for opportunities for him to be creative or solve problems around sales goals to keep him invested in his work.

BOTTOM LINE:

Ian may be expected to complete a typical sales training program with success and be generally adaptive in most training situations.

PACE

Behavioral Traits

Pace Overall rate of task completion

< STEADY

URGENT >

IL

- Ian does not fit the Performance Model for Pace.
- He tends to be very patient and good with routine.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He may be well-suited for a sales environment that employs a methodical approach to the sales process.
- Typically, he may not show a high sense of urgency under routine sales assignments.
- Ian probably doesn't like feeling pressured, even with looming sales goals.
- He tends to have a strong preference for working at an unhurried pace.
- Most interested in a job well done, he could appreciate a sales environment that places a greater value on the quality of the sales process rather than the quantity of sales.

Management tips:

- Work with him to set appropriate sales deadlines and quotas, and be sure to develop tactics for crunch periods requiring a rapid pace.
- Recognize the benefits of his ability to stay focused, but let him know when you believe a more urgent pace would be beneficial or necessary.
- Give him sales opportunities that require longevity and steadiness.

BOTTOM LINE:

Ian may be most effective working in a relaxed environment where he can focus on one task at a time.

ASSERTIVENESS

Behavioral Traits

Assertiveness Expression of opinions and need for control

< UNASSUMING

FORCEFUL >

IL

- Ian fits the Performance Model for Assertiveness.
- He tends to be fairly comfortable sticking up for his opinions and needs.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He tends to be motivated by situations in which he is held accountable for results.
- He is willing to be assertive, to be more of a leader than a follower.
- Ian typically uses direct statements in sales negotiations.
- He will likely present his sales pitch with a fair amount of confidence.
- At times, he may be overly assertive when negotiating sales.

Management tips:

- Provide positive feedback when he engages in active listening rather than just pushing his agenda.
- If you notice that he tends to dominate in sales situations, provide feedback suggesting that he allow clients more opportunity to express their doubts.
- Give him opportunities to lead discussions if he appears to have a desire to do so.

BOTTOM LINE:

He takes on leadership roles comfortably but is still willing to listen to others' perspectives carefully when the situation calls for it.

SOCIABILITY

Behavioral Traits

Sociability Desire for interaction with others

< RESERVED

IL

OUTGOING >

- Ian fits the Performance Model for Sociability.
- He tends to be fairly introverted and may often keep to himself.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He may be somewhat uncomfortable as the center of attention.
- He expresses moderate enjoyment of salesmanship involving contact with clients.
- Ian tends to prefer working with a detached, task-oriented style of sales service.
- He may prefer to accomplish sales in a more formal, "strictly business" fashion.
- He can likely work well without relying on strong personal relationships.

Management tips:

- Ask him how he prefers to be approached when you need him (email, phone, one-on-one, etc.).
- Encourage him to socialize with his fellow salespeople, prospects, and clients, but also recognize that this may be somewhat draining for him.
- Maintain a casual demeanor with him, encouraging a more open and relaxed way of communicating with others.

BOTTOM LINE:

Ian tends to prefer an impersonal sales style.

CONFORMITY

Behavioral Traits

Conformity Attitude on policies and supervision

< STRONG-WILLED

IL

COMPLIANT >

- Ian fits the Performance Model for Conformity.
- He may question or dispute established procedures and policies on occasion.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He would sometimes prefer to establish and follow his own course of action, in spite of advice from a sales manager.
- He generally cooperates with most sales directives handed down from those in authority but may push back against high-pressure leadership styles.
- Ian may become defensive with a sales manager when receiving criticism or feedback.
- At times, he may engage in mild complaining about a procedure or certain sales approaches.
- He might sometimes defend his point of view, even if a sales manager, prospect, or client disagrees with him.

Management tips:

- Acknowledge the value of questioning policies and procedures that must be followed.
- Allow him opportunities to work in his own way, but be clear about sales tasks and policies that are non-negotiable.
- Invite him to share, in a constructive manner, any ideas on how policies and sales approaches can be improved.

BOTTOM LINE:

He can work without strict sales policies and procedures but accepts them as needed.

OUTLOOK

Behavioral Traits

Outlook Anticipation of outcomes and motives

< SKEPTICAL

IL

TRUSTING >

- Ian fits the Performance Model for Outlook.
- He tends to be fairly skeptical and often looks for the evidence to back up a claim.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He may have a guarded outlook on how well things are likely to turn out.
- He may be skeptical of clients who make emotional appeals.
- Ian may not always welcome change, unless it is supported by strong justification.
- He tends to question changes in the sales process and can be doubtful of the benefits.
- He may approach sales challenges and difficult clients with caution.

Management tips:

- Be sure to clarify your intentions so he doesn't jump to conclusions.
- Allow him to openly express his skepticism so you can provide the reassurance or evidence that he or others might need.
- Although skepticism can uncover important issues, be watchful that this doesn't produce an overly negative sales environment or contentious interactions with prospects and clients.

BOTTOM LINE:

Ian functions best when able to express a reasonable amount of concern and skepticism in sales situations.

DECISIVENESS

Behavioral Traits

Decisiveness Use of speed and caution to make decisions

< DELIBERATE

IL

BOLD >

- Ian does not fit the Performance Model for Decisiveness.
- He prefers to take some time to think carefully before making a decision.

What you need to know about Ian:

- Ian is capable of making timely decisions during sales negotiations, but may hesitate when under stress.
- He usually takes time to collect supporting information and data before drawing conclusions.
- Most likely, he will carefully weigh the risks of a situation before making a decision.
- If he feels disorganized or ill-prepared, Ian may delay making important decisions during the sales process.
- He likely prefers to have a reasonable amount of time to consider significant decisions.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to find a constructive way to evaluate ideas, such as listing pros and cons.
- Set a clear deadline for when you require an answer.
- Give him opportunities to make smaller or less critical decisions in a more timely fashion.

BOTTOM LINE:

He prefers to make careful, informed decisions, but can be convinced to move quickly when urgency is required.

ACCOMMODATION

Behavioral Traits

Accommodation Inclination to tend to others' needs and ideas

< STEADFAST

AGREEABLE >

IL

- Ian fits the Performance Model for Accommodating.
- He tends to be fairly agreeable and willing to go along with the group.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He tends to have a cooperative outlook and is generally prepared to help clients.
- Usually, he recognizes the need for working with others and is willing to share resources and information.
- When it comes to most issues, he is more likely to express a moderate opinion than an extreme one.
- Ian is generally pleasant, friendly, and patient during sales negotiations.
- He will probably seek solutions that are acceptable to everyone during the sales process.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to express his opinions rather than just going along with the group or trying to appease a client.
- Provide opportunities for him to build his self-confidence so that he is more likely to speak up with a differing opinion when working with clients.
- When appropriate, enlist his aid to help colleagues reach compromises.

BOTTOM LINE:

He is attentive to clients but also appreciates a forum to express a contrary point of view.

INDEPENDENCE

Behavioral Traits

Independence Level of preference for instruction and guidance

< RELIANT

IL

AUTONOMOUS >

- Ian does not fit the Performance Model for Independence.
- He may seek support and is usually ready to accept supervision.

What you need to know about Ian:

- Most of the time, he recognizes the need for guidance during the sales process.
- Occasionally, he may prefer to proceed through sales negotiations his own way.
- Most likely, he works best with defined plans and established sales procedures.
- Ian probably believes that job responsibilities should be clearly defined so that everybody knows what is expected of them.
- He generally prefers to follow an established sales process.

Management tips:

- Be available to answer questions or offer support as needed during the sales process.
- If more autonomy is desirable, assign sales tasks with an increasing level of independence so he becomes more comfortable working on his own.
- In cases where he is directing his own work, make sure he understands he can come to you for support.

BOTTOM LINE:

Ian usually prefers specific instructions and a moderate level of guidance.

JUDGMENT

Behavioral Traits

Judgment Basis for forming opinions and making decisions

< INTUITIVE

FACTUAL >

IL

- Ian fits the Performance Model for Judgment.
- He tends to supplement objective facts with relevant subjectivity when making decisions.

What you need to know about Ian:

- He usually emphasizes logical deduction a bit more than intuition in his thinking.
- At times, he may neglect to consider the extenuating circumstances of a sales negotiation.
- He could overlook the potential value of instinct when determining sales solutions.
- He is seldom swayed by emotional pleas.
- Ian generally makes reasonable, objective judgments.

Management tips:

- At times, you may need to remind him to look to his sales experience and intuition during sales negotiations.
- Recognize that he may find it stressful if he is required to make sales decisions with limited factual information.
- When appropriate, encourage him to look at extenuating circumstances and use his personal judgment when making decisions with clients and prospects.

BOTTOM LINE:

He typically uses judgment that reflects a balance of logic and practical experience.

PEOPLE SERVICE

What is Ian most interested in?

Financial/Admin: Ian appears to be interested in the Financial or Administrative side of selling situations. Therefore, he is likely to organize sales-related information in order to make the selling process more efficient. A main source of motivation for him may be in classifying and managing information.

Mechanical: Ian seems to be motivated by Mechanical activities. He may enjoy meeting sales goals with a grounded, practical approach and he likely welcomes opportunities to get his “hands dirty” with sales objectives that are tangible, practical, and functional. If he can contribute this way, he is more likely to feel enthusiastic about the sales task at hand.

Technical: Technical aspects of the sales process appear to interest Ian. Most likely, he is interested in sales presentations that involve research, theories, and the application of technical information. He may be particularly interested in analytical or conceptual tasks that require critical thinking.

Enterprising: Seeking out Enterprising pursuits or leadership may be one of Ian’s primary interests. It’s likely that he will use persuasiveness to close the deal. Also, he will probably be attracted to activities that let him network or find new prospects.

BOTTOM LINE:

Ian will likely enjoy the Enterprising aspects of the job. However, he may not find Creative and People Service activities as motivating as other salespeople who have been successful in this position.
