INTRODUCTION

This report is intended to give you a deeper understanding of Arthur Addington's Thinking Style, Behavioral Traits, and Interests in relation to the position of Business Manager. Along with some insight into his motivations and challenge areas, it will provide you with useful tips to aid in his training and development.

What's in this report?
RESULTS SUMMARY Assessment results are compared to the Performance Model, which shows the range of scores typical for success in the position	DEFINITIONS Thinking Style and Behavioral Traits will be defined on the pages following the results summary	PERSONALIZED FEEDBACK You will receive feedback personalized for the individual based on the results and how they should be interpreted

What does the assessment measure?

THINKING STYLE

- Thinking Style is the ability to process information.
- It includes problem-solving, communication, interaction, and learning skills.
- Results are illustrated on scales ranging from 1 to 10.
- A higher score is not necessarily the best indicator of on-the-job performance.

BEHAVIORAL TRAITS

- Behavioral Traits are commonly observed actions that help define who someone is.
- Each scale is defined by two opposing, but equally valuable, end points.
- One side of the continuum is not better than the other.

INTERESTS

- The Interests section may predict motivation and potential satisfaction with various jobs.
- These are ranked in order from the highest- to lowest-scoring interest.

Distortion was not detected in this report. What does that mean?

Some candidates may answer in a way that is socially desirable or to make themselves look better, rather than respond candidly and risk disapproval. Based on his assessment results, it appears that Arthur answered candidly.

COMPOSITE SCORE

Thinking Style

Composite Score A reflection of overall learning, reasoning, and problem-solving potential

The Composite Score is the combined score of the four other Thinking Style scales. Because looking at a person's Thinking Style comprehensively is most effective in a coaching context, it is the only Thinking Style scale discussed in this report.

- Arthur does not fit the Performance Model for the Composite Score.
- He picks up new information within a reasonable amount of time but may occasionally require closer attention when learning some material.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He might require more time than average to learn all of the complicated or demanding information required for the job.
- Repetition in a training program may be most effective for him.
- Arthur is capable of understanding and developing solutions for most basic problems.
- He may sometimes need extra training and encouragement to learn complex information.
- A systematic training program is probably best suited to his learning style.

Management tips:

- Offer direct and immediate feedback, and encourage him to ask questions and take notes as needed.
- For particularly demanding tasks, Arthur may benefit from having repeated opportunities to practice and refine his approach.
- Check in frequently with Arthur about his comfort level with his work until you are both confident he has mastered the task.

BOTTOM LINE:

Arthur is capable of learning basic, straightforward information but may need more time to grasp advanced concepts.

PACE

Behavioral Traits

Pace Overall rate of task completion

< STEADY

AA

URGENT >

- Arthur does not fit the Performance Model for Pace.
- He tends to be very patient and good with routine.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He may be well-suited to work with methodical processes.
- Typically, he may not show a high sense of urgency.
- Arthur probably doesn't like feeling pressured.
- He tends to have a strong preference to work at an unhurried pace.
- Most interested in a job well done, he could appreciate an environment that fosters quality over quantity.

Management tips:

- Work with him to set appropriate timelines and to develop coping mechanisms for crunch periods requiring a rapid pace.
- Recognize the benefits of his ability to stay focused, but let him know when you believe that more urgency would be beneficial.
- Give him projects that require longevity and steadiness.

BOTTOM LINE:

Arthur may be most effective working in a relaxed environment where he can focus on one task at a time.

ASSERTIVENESS

Behavioral Traits

Assertiveness Expression of opinions and need for control

< UNASSUMING

AA

FORCEFUL >

- Arthur fits the Performance Model for Assertiveness.
- He tends to be fairly comfortable sticking up for his opinions and needs.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He tends to be motivated by situations in which he is held accountable for results.
- He is willing to be assertive, to be more of a leader than a follower.
- Arthur typically uses direct statements.
- He will likely present his position with a fair amount of confidence.
- At times, he may be overly assertive when giving direction to others.

Management tips:

- Provide positive feedback when he engages in active listening rather than pushing forth with his agenda.
- If you notice that he is too dominating in situations, provide feedback suggesting that he allow others more opportunity to offer input.
- Give him opportunities to lead discussions if he appears to have a desire to do so.

BOTTOM LINE:

He takes on leadership roles comfortably but is still willing to follow direction from someone else when necessary.

SOCIABILITY

Behavioral Traits

Sociability Desire for interaction with others

< RESERVED

OUTGOING >

AA

- Arthur does not fit the Performance Model for Sociability.
- He tends to be very extraverted and people-oriented.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He interacts with others regularly and has a generally friendly disposition.
- He may find it very difficult to work isolated from others.
- Arthur tends to be open and approachable within and outside the organization.
- Most likely, he establishes and develops a wide network of professional colleagues.
- He likes to confer with others and may, at times, socialize excessively.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to talk through his ideas since this is how he likely processes information.
- Challenge him to draw out the perspectives of more introverted colleagues.
- Give him plenty of opportunities to socialize and be a part of group dynamics, but be careful about allowing this to impede his work.

BOTTOM LINE:

Arthur is motivated by the chance to interact with others, welcoming opportunities for group activity.

CONFORMITY

Behavioral Traits

Conformity Attitude on policies and supervision

< STRONG-WILLED

AA

COMPLIANT >

- Arthur fits the Performance Model for Conformity.
- He tends to be cooperative and usually works within the rules.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He is typically willing to accept guidance and suggestions from others.
- He is friendly, cooperative, and likely fairly easy to manage.
- Arthur demonstrates a positive attitude concerning organizational constraints and restrictions.
- He should be willing to conform to company policies without feeling any loss of personal freedom.
- He will usually accept the advice and criticism of those in authority.

Management tips:

- Encourage free thinking and reward efforts to develop creative solutions to accomplishing tasks, even if they contradict established procedures.
- Acknowledge the importance of procedural requirements, but encourage personal expression in areas that don't need as much regulation.
- Demonstrate in your daily work how it is acceptable to bend the rules within the limits of your organizational culture.

BOTTOM LINE:

He responds well to a regulated environment and is willing to accept external controls.

OUTLOOK

Behavioral Traits

Outlook Anticipation of outcomes and motives

< SKEPTICAL

AA

TRUSTING >

- Arthur does not fit the Performance Model for Outlook.
- He tends to be fairly skeptical and often looks for the evidence to back up a claim.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He may have a guarded outlook on how well things are likely to turn out.
- He may be skeptical of people who make emotional appeals.
- Arthur may not always welcome change, unless it is supported by a strong justification.
- He tends to question changes in policies and guidelines and can be doubtful of the benefits.
- He may approach solving problems and interpersonal conflict with caution.

Management tips:

- Clarify your intentions so he doesn't jump to conclusions.
- Allow him to openly express his skepticism so you can provide the reassurance or evidence that he or others might need.
- Although skepticism can uncover important issues, be watchful that this doesn't produce an overly negative environment.

BOTTOM LINE:

Arthur functions best when able to express a reasonable amount of concern and skepticism.

DECISIVENESS

Behavioral Traits

Decisiveness Use of speed and caution to make decisions

< DELIBERATE

AA

BOLD >

- Arthur fits the Performance Model for Decisiveness.
- He prefers to take some time to think carefully before making a decision.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- Arthur is capable of making timely decisions, but may hesitate when under stress.
- He usually takes time to collect supporting information and data before drawing conclusions.
- Most likely, he will carefully weigh the risks of a situation before making a decision.
- If he feels disorganized or ill-prepared, Arthur may delay important decisions.
- He likely prefers to have a reasonable amount of time to consider significant decisions.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to find a constructive way to evaluate ideas such as listing pros and cons.
- Set a clear deadline for when you require an answer.
- Give him opportunities to make smaller or less critical decisions in a more timely fashion.

BOTTOM LINE:

He prefers to make careful, informed decisions, but can be convinced to draw quicker conclusions when urgency is required.

ACCOMMODATION

Behavioral Traits

Accommodation Inclination to tend to others' needs and ideas

< STEADFAST

AGREEABLE >

AA

- Arthur fits the Performance Model for Accommodating.
- He tends to be fairly agreeable and willing to go along with the group.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He tends to have a cooperative outlook and is generally prepared to help others.
- Usually, he recognizes the need for working with others and is willing to share resources and information.
- When it comes to most issues, he is more likely to express a moderate opinion than an extreme one.
- Arthur is generally pleasant, friendly, and patient.
- He will probably seek solutions that are acceptable to everyone.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to express his opinions rather than just going along with the group.
- Provide opportunities for him to build his self-confidence so that he is more likely to speak up with a differing opinion.
- When appropriate, enlist his aid to help colleagues reach compromises.

BOTTOM LINE:

He is attentive to others but also appreciates the forum to express a contrary point of view.

INDEPENDENCE

Behavioral Traits

Independence Level of preference for instruction and guidance

< RELIANT

AA

AUTONOMOUS >

- Arthur does not fit the Performance Model for Independence.
- He may seek support and is usually ready to accept supervision.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- He recognizes the need for guidance most of the time.
- Occasionally, he may prefer to do things his own way.
- Most likely, he works best with defined plans and established methods.
- Arthur probably believes that job responsibilities should be clearly defined so that everybody knows what is expected of them.
- He generally prefers to follow established procedures.

Management tips:

- Be available to answer questions or offer support as needed.
- If more autonomy is desirable, assign tasks with an increasing level of independence so he becomes more comfortable working on his own.
- In cases where he is directing his own work, make sure he understands he can come to you for support.

BOTTOM LINE:

Arthur usually prefers specific instructions and a moderate level of guidance.

JUDGMENT

Behavioral Traits

Judgment Basis for forming opinions and making decisions

< INTUITIVE

AA

FACTUAL >

- Arthur does not fit the Performance Model for Judgment.
- He tends to supplement personal experience and instinct with available facts to make decisions.

What you need to know about Arthur:

- At times, he could neglect relevant objective information.
- He may rely more on his instincts than the relevant facts when making decisions.
- He usually takes the circumstances of a situation into account before making judgment calls.
- When he feels it's appropriate, he can be swayed by emotional arguments.
- When there isn't enough factual information available, Arthur is probably comfortable going on a hunch.

Management tips:

- Encourage him to investigate a variety of sources when making decisions.
- Ask him to explain his reasoning behind any critical decisions.
- When necessary, help him gather more evidence to make an informed decision.

BOTTOM LINE:

He may try to balance his subjective biases with logic to make well-rounded decisions.

TIED

What is Arthur most interested in?

Enterprising: Seeking out Enterprising pursuits or leadership may be one of Arthur's primary interests. It's likely that he will look for opportunities to use persuasiveness to achieve goals or lead others toward the victory line. Also, he will probably be attracted to activities that let him network or find new opportunities.

Financial/Admin: Arthur appears to be interested in Financial or Administrative tasks. Therefore, he is likely to seek out activities that involve organizing or otherwise dealing with budgets, information, and/or supplies. A main source of motivation for him may be in classifying and managing information.

Mechanical: Arthur seems to be motivated by Mechanical activities. He may enjoy building or repairing things, and he likely welcomes opportunities to get his "hands dirty" with objectives that are tangible, practical, and functional. If he can contribute in this way, he is more likely to feel enthusiastic about the project at hand.

BOTTOM LINE:

Arthur will likely enjoy the Enterprising and Financial/Administrative aspects of the job. However, he may not find People Service activities as motivating as others who have been successful in this position.
